Expected Learning Outcomes

The Certificate in Criminology and Criminal Justice (CCJ), which is three more hours than the Minor, provides students the opportunity to identify and select more advanced (higher level) courses than required for the Minor, thereby allowing students the opportunity to grasp a more comprehensive theoretical understanding of crime and responses to it.

Students earning a Certificate in CCJ Students will have greater latitude, than provided by the Minor, to select courses that focus in specific areas in CCJ. This includes courses that address subjects such as: criminal justice policy; the role and experience of the victim; the role that race, gender and/or culture play in crime and criminal behavior; focusing on specific forms of criminal behavior (e.g., violent, property, drug, computer…).

• Students will acquire knowledge to employ critical thinking skills when evaluating issues in criminology and criminal justice
• Students will be able to describe the structure and functioning of the fundamental institutions (e.g., police, courts, corrections) that comprise the criminal justice system in the United States.
• Students will critically assess and evaluate contemporary issues and research in criminology and criminal justice.
• Students will be able to draw on relevant criminological theory and assess the application of such theory to the complexity of crime analysis.
• Students earning a Certificate in CCJ will be able to develop an assessment plan for an academic major or program and/or assist them in selecting a career path.
• Students earning a Certificate in CCJ will explore and focus on specific advanced areas of crime and criminal justice that are appropriate for graduate school preparation and career advancement.
