Learning Outcomes

Graduates with a minor in Japanese from the University of Missouri-St. Louis can use the language to interact with native speakers on familiar topics related to their daily lives. They have an emerging understanding of Japanese culture fostered through engaging courses and opportunities such as study abroad. They can apply their linguistic and cultural competencies in real-life situations such as travel and work.

Skills and Knowledge Areas

Upon completion of the Japanese minor, students should be able to:

Linguistic Goals

- In listening/speaking:
 - demonstrate comprehension of the main ideas and supporting details of everyday conversations on familiar and concrete topics, both formal and informal;
 - take part in conversations on topics related to work, school, home, leisure activities, culture, and media;
 - narrate short anecdotes using Japanese conversational conventions; and,
 - function in real-world situations in culturally-appropriate ways.
- In reading/writing:
 - interpret basic authentic texts, such as menus and schedules;
 - apply reading strategies to glean key information from more challenging texts;
 - compose simple practical messages, such as personal emails and letters; and,
 - assess language reference resources and use them effectively.

Cultural Goals

- recognize and describe some of the key historical, social, economic, and political forces that shape Japanese society;
- analyze and critique the products of Japanese culture (film, media, literature, art, etc.) in socio-historical context.

The linguistic goals are based on the National Standards For Foreign Language Learning and the ACTFL Proficiency Guidelines. In speaking and listening, minors are expected to reach the Intermediate-Mid level
